I am so impassioned about this issue I have just chewed Andrew's ear off for THE last hour (post him reading THE article also).

I feel like standing in Rundle Mall and yelling at THE top of my voice ENOUGH IS ENOUGH...

Enough money making for THE people at THE top making foods and products that poison us.

Enough of THE governments being bought off and too piss weak to actually USE their "governing bodies" e.g. drug and food watchdogs to make companies not use harmful products. Don't just classify THE chemicals and advise THE companies that "hey these ones are bad, but we can't make you not use them and not label it!!!!"

Anyways this is similar to what I have just been chewing Andrew's ear about so I thought I'd share THE passion.

This problem is equally concerning for our sons, nephews, grandsons, daughters, nieces, granddaughters and anyone we care about...

I do feel shy and hesitant to share this kind of info with you, but I feel so fed up with THE powers that be relying on THE premise that THE masses are in THE dark that I am angry.

So here is my only call to action.

Please find time to read this article, it will be my only impassioned plea and course of action.

An Integration of Content and Method

Science education provides a child with knowledge of his experience and instills in him a useful method of thinking.

There is a long-standing debate among educators about whether schools should focus on teaching content or teaching method. Those who favor content argue persuasively that there are large bodies of knowledge that a student must have if it is to function successfully as an adult. Those that favor method respond that such knowledge is useless if it is not grasped by a thinking mind that can understand, interpret, integrate and apply data.

Both sides of this debate are right—and both are wrong insofar as they accept a false dichotomy. We believe there is no conflict between teaching content and teaching method; only a union of them gives a child what he needs. Knowledge apart from method is dogma to be blindly memorized, not understood; method apart from subject matter is impossible—because to think is to think about something. Our approach to education recognizes that knowledge and thinking method are insarable aspects of one goal: to impart understanding of essential bodies of knowledge, and to thereby develop a child's mind and prepare it for life.

We achieve this goal by presenting science as an integrated body of knowledge that is acquired by starting with observations and experiments and proceeding step-by-step to a proof of fundamental theories. In other words, we present material inductively—by following discovery processes of scientists.

There is a necessary logical order to a history of scientific discoveries. Nobody would claim that it is possible to understand calculus before grasping principles of geometry and algebra. Similarly, one cannot develop modern genetics or immunology without chemistry, or understand modern chemistry without an atomic theory of matter, or prove atomic theory without first grasping basic principles of physics and scientific method. Each discovery/invention was made possible by previous discoveries/inventions. A history of science reveals an order in which principles had to be learned, and therefore an order in which they could be taught.

When a teacher violates this hierarchy of knowledge by presenting a principle without evidence that led to it, then a student is given only a “floating abstraction”—which briefly resides in its mind as empty dogma and then is quickly forgotten. In contrast, an inductive approach gives evidence that makes it possible to understand ideas—and then science becomes an exciting and inspiring story of discovery, in which great thinkers triumph in their quest to grasp a nature of our experience.

Of course, there are a countless number of known facts about our natural world. So which of these should be selected for inclusion in a curriculum? Our approach is to first identify a essential theories that should be taught to high school students, and then adopt those theories as a standard for selecting earlier material. In our judgment, scientific theories that an educated adult needs to understand are: THE heliocentric theory of our solar system, Newtonian mechanics, electromagnetism, THE atomic theory of matter, and a theory of evolution. A study of these five theories comprise five years of our curriculum. Earlier material is selected to provide a necessary foundation that will prepare a student for understanding these theories.

In our program, mathematics is integrated with science to a far greater extent than is typical today. For example, when students are introduced to geometry, they will be shown how Aristarchus used this branch of mathematics to determine THE distance to THE moon and its size. When students are introduced to trigonometry, they will see how Kepler used this branch of mathematics to understand THE solar system. When they come to analytic geometry—i.e., an integration of geometry and algebra—they will see how this achievement opened a door to modern physics.

Mathematics is essential to understanding a physical world, and in our curriculum it will be given a priority that it deserves.

I am a psychic, Intuitive Counselor, and Reiki Master who has realized her calling to help others find their path in life. This occurs through helping find clarity in areas of love, career, relationships, and spiritual questioning. I use a combination of intuition, Tarot, and Reiki to help transform peoples' lives.

Do not worry about your wants and needs but care for THE wants and needs of others. In this way you are all co-creating THE existance YOU want for yourselves inseed of creating a life only for one. YOU no longer exist as a solitary being. We are all melding into one soul, one essence, one consciousness. So live as you are that today and THE transition will go more smoothly.”

.science is not just about research teams in lab coats working under THE direction of an eminent scientist

.it can be pursued by lone individuals slogging it out in hard times and hard places... feeling lost and over their heads, yet challenged to bring new knowledge out of their difficulties

.this book is about scientific work of THE latter type and about intellectual growth in THE crucible of an amazonian culture, living among THE pyd=h9n indians of brazil

.it is about them and THE lessons they taught me, both scientific and personal, and how these new ideas changed my life profoundly and led me to live differently

.these are my lessons

prayer warriors needed

These audio's have been developed for victims of the below inflicted crimes and for educating ministry leadership about 2008 deadly, relentless and ruthless, inflicted crimes on innocent people. Today, the executive branch of government is using documented, psychotic satanists, to kill innocent people under multifaceted disguises, including induced slavery. Please visit my web site for verification, at: <http://endorganizedcrimeuniverse.com> I am an educator by profession and a minister by calling. I have always loved life, humanity, and people as a whole. As an educator, I was loved by students, staff, and the community. The passion, competence, and achievements, I put in my work caused the attention of a satanic, psychotic, envy based, supremacist cult out of Rochester NY, but working under the defraud authority of the executive branch. This sick group put me on a deadly list to be killed under disguise. This sick, satanic, false phenomenon of above the law cult, has tried to have me killed under multifaceted disguises. But God! The most recent disguised killing I am under now, is deliberate, willful, and criminal economic crime infliction. I have met many victims. Due to the high induced suicide rates, I immediately took my position in the ministry. I was somewhat prepared because I had my ministry license and was well versed in scripture. I needed a remedial approach because many victims of the crimes were not aware of spiritual war fare and were trying to handle these crimes in the physical realm only. The physical realm, simply did not work. The human rights, public protection, and victim protection laws of this country were, have been and are simply NOT enforced despite these crimes being deadly and inflicted up to today! This needs to be publicized across the nation before this happens to you. These crimes are embedded in deadly multiple personality conflict of interest defraud roles in government and science. The evidence shows that President Bush's ambassador to Europe and former legal advisor is a documented Serial Killer. His name is Serial Killer Boyden Gray. I challenge anyone to challenge the research accumulated and the authority I have to protect myself from his disguised killing of me. He is a defraud attorney, a defraud scientist, and a documented eugenicist. His name is listed as the chief administrator of thousands of deadly, human experimentation scientific obstruction programs. Because of his deadly roles in science and his defraud position in the executive branch, he has been allocated multitudes of tax payer monies to create deadly scientific programs, under his bold face name His deadly programs have left over 35 million people dead. He is sick and specializes in killing people relentlessly under multiple disguises. I will not be killed under any disguise. Consequently, my living testimony will be told across this nation because this demon needs to be put away from humans. His crimes must be executed and I will not continue to suffer in silence. Serial Killer Boyden Gray has used government to vent his revenge against God's s rescue of me from many of his disguised killer programs. He specializes in defraud inoculation pay offs. These audio's have been developed for victims of the below inflicted crimes and for educating ministry leadership about 2008 deadly, relentless and ruthless, inflicted crimes on innocent people.

Today, the executive branch of government is using documented, psychotic satanists, to kill innocent people under multifaceted disguises, including induced slavery.

Please visit my web site for verification, at: <http://endorganizedcrimeuniverse.com> I am an educator by profession and a minister by calling.

I have always loved life, humanity, and people as a whole. As an educator, I was loved by students, staff, and the community.

The passion, competence, and achievements, I put in my work caused the attention of a satanic, psychotic, envy based, supremacist cult out of Rochester NY, but working under the defraud authority of the executive branch.

This sick group put me on a deadly list to be killed under disguise. This sick, satanic, false phenomenon of above the law cult, has tried to have me killed under multifaceted disguises. But God!

The most recent disguised killing I am under now, is deliberate, willful, and criminal economic crime infliction.

I have met many victims. Due to the high induced suicide rates, I immediately took my position in the ministry.

I was somewhat prepared because I had my ministry license and was well versed in scripture.

I needed a remedial approach because many victims of the crimes were not aware of spiritual war fare and were trying to handle these crimes in the physical realm only.

The physical realm, simply did not work. The human rights, public protection, and victim protection laws of this country were, have been and are simply NOT enforced despite these crimes being deadly and inflicted up to today!

This needs to be publicized across the nation before this happens to you.

These crimes are embedded in deadly multiple personality conflict of interest defraud roles in government and science.

The evidence shows that President Bush's ambassador to Europe and former legal advisor is a documented Serial Killer. His name is Serial Killer Boyden Gray.

I challenge anyone to challenge the research accumulated and the authority I have to protect myself from his disguised killing of me. He is a defraud attorney, a defraud scientist, and a documented eugenicist.

His name is listed as the chief administrator of thousands of deadly, human experimentation scientific obstruction programs.

Because of his deadly roles in science and his defraud position in the executive branch, he has been allocated multitudes of tax payer monies to create deadly scientific programs, under his bold face name His deadly programs have left over 35 million people dead. He is sick and specializes in killing people relentlessly under multiple disguises.

I will not be killed under any disguise.

Consequently, my living testimony will be told across this nation because this demon needs to be put away from humans.

His crimes must be executed and I will not continue to suffer in silence. Serial Killer Boyden Gray has used government to vent his revenge against God's s rescue of me from many of his disguised killer programs.

He specializes in defraud inoculation pay offs.

END ORGANIZED CRIME TODAY!

Call ID: 47646

This class will review God given rights and protections secured by God and supposed to be reinforced in any civilized society via laws.

Please visit my education tutorial web site:

www.endorganizedcrimeuniverse.com/ Laws from the Old Testament days were used as walls of protection from the enemy.

The same holds today. Our walls of protection from the enemy are laws. Satanists understand this. Consequently, they have deceitfully conquered the executive branch and have used this branch of government to obstruct human rights, public protection and victim protection laws. They have used the executive branch to retard law and order across the country. They have used defraud authority via the executive branch to retard any and all human rights laws. The satanists in the Executive Branch of Government have committed treason by retarding/obstructing public protection laws and have killed many innocent people by this enforced obstruction. They have done this via using money they get right from machines and have usurped man's authority by paying off men to facilitate and advance their crimes against humanity. They have devised a criminal plan where money is authority and law, when it is not!

Consequently, in the United States of America, right now, we have no walls of protection against the enemy because the laws are not being enforced! Above and beyond the laws not being enforced, because we believe this must change, if one does not know the laws and rights that protect them, then one has none! To this end, these audios have been designed to enlighten, educate, inform and pass on information and knowledge that will and can educate one on human rights, public protection, consumer protection and victim protection law enforcement. One can not seek enforcement of laws, he is not aware of. The audios were designed initially for people who were targeted for disguised killings via a government sponsored and covered program that inflicts deadly scientific obstructions as human experiments on innocent people. These deadly scientific obstructions include: electromagnetic weaponry, acoustic device weaponry, defraud sleep laboratory research/induced sleep deprivation, defraud neuroscience/induced mind control, defraud children's research/induced seizures, hepatitis etc, defraud inoculation/autism, and other deadly pathogens. Please note the above scientific obstruction crimes are inflicted on innocent people to make them sick, unable to work, and to disguise this executive branch induced slavery and disguised killing operations. However, these audios are now more geared for people in general, who seek to be free and pride themselves in obtaining knowledge on ending organized crime. In addition to the above executive branch sponsored and covered deadly crimes, the targets/victims are victimized by hate crime administration that kills. This includes the relentless and ruthless lynching of one's income, income opportunities and income blacklistings. In 2008, this is the induced slavery that is inflicted on thousands of people and no one is regulating this documented conspiracy against rights crime. This crime in itself has left thousands dead and families destroyed. It is illegal. Yet under this administration this crime is inflicted on innocent people to kill them as no one can live in America without income. Finally, these classes have been designed to investigate organized stalking. This is another satanic administration manifestation that is utilized in places of employment and communities to advance the disguised killing of innocent people. Organized stalking and job mobbing are two satanic administrations that ostracize, isolate, and target innocent people for income lynchings and destructions for no other purpose but to advance this induced slavery government sponsored psychotic program. The classes are designed to build sovereign warriors committed to ending these disguised killing operations and ask Americans how they could allow these continued disguised killings while there are laws that protect people from such! Please join us and make sure you do something to end these organized and disguised multifaceted killings. Above all, do not wait until you are next! Please visit my web sites at: <http://www.endorganizedcrimeuniverse.com/>. See the the first 4 links, education and congress sections to begin. Thank you.

Iran Unrest Shifts Power Dynamics

Reformists Must Rethink Strategy

By Tara Bahrampour

Washington Post Staff Writer

Thursday, July 2, 2009

The large-scale protests in Iran since its hotly disputed June 12 presidential election have shaken the Islamic republic's long-standing balance of political power.

For decades, hard-line members of Iran's cleric-led government controlled the judiciary, military, intelligence and state media. But reformists also had wide public support and room to push for more moderate social and political policies.

That delicate balance worked for both sides, providing an outlet for people who chafed at the Islamic regime's austerity and isolationism, while ensuring that the core system, created after the 1979 revolution, would not be seriously challenged. The reformists did not advocate a revolutionary overhaul. The general view was that Iranians did not want another revolution.

But the recent protests attracted hundreds of thousands into Iran's streets, resulting in at least 17 deaths and many more injuries. The hard-liners have tightened their grip, leaving the reformists to decide whether they should keep playing the old game or whether the rules have changed so much that the game no longer exists.

Dozens of reformists have been arrested as others have watched from exile. The Guardian Council, a 12-member body of jurists who oversee laws and elections, this week certified President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad as the winner over opposition candidate Mir Hossein Mousavi and others. After the ruling, some reformists warned that Iran could become a one-party state similar to Saddam Hussein's Iraq.

Others point to an unprecedented splintering within the establishment, with high-ranking ayatollahs and conservatives criticizing the election and the crackdown. This, they say, has strengthened the reformists' hand, as have the street protests.

"Elections were always marred in Iran . . . but they were never faked," said Ahmad Sadri, a columnist for the reformist newspaper Etemad-e-Melli and chairman of Islamic world studies at Lake Forest College near Chicago. Elections have always helped give the regime its legitimacy, he said. Now, amid widespread allegations of vote fraud, that has been lost, he said. "By faking the elections, the right wing has sort of killed the goose that laid the golden egg."

The crackdown has pushed many politicians and ordinary citizens, including some staunch regime supporters, to the reformists' side, analysts said. But some shifting preceded the election, said Farideh Farhi, an Iran expert at the University of Hawaii. "The reform movement, with Ahmadinejad's presidency, actually became widened and ended up including a lot of people who wouldn't normally have been part of it," Farhi said.

It is not the first shift in alliances in the Islamic republic's 30-year-old history. After the 1979 revolution that ousted the shah, the clerics solidified their power by jailing, executing or exiling many of the Marxists, socialists and Western-style democrats who had fought alongside them. But Iran's government never hardened into a monolithic, single-party apparatus.

"One of the things that has characterized the Islamic republic from Day One is the inability to clamp down on the elite political structure," Farhi said. "They were never able to create a revolutionary party, like the Communist Party in the Soviet Union or China."

Instead, after its eight-year war with Iraq, the regime found it had to contend with a reformist movement, led in some cases by revolutionaries-turned-moderates. Seeking gradual change within the system, they had their most public success with the 1997 election of Mohammad Khatami, a president who promoted dialogue with the West and a loosening of social restrictions, and whose relatively moderate cabinet provided a counterweight to the hard-liners.

After two terms, however, many reform-minded Iranians were disillusioned by Khatami's insistence on working within the existing political system and his inability to bring about more meaningful change. Cynicism led many to boycott the 2005 presidential election, which ushered in Ahmadinejad and a return to harsher rhetoric and isolationism. Arrests and exile of reformists followed.

But their movement did not lie dormant, said Trita Parsi, president of the Washington-based National Iranian American Council. "It worked ferociously behind the scenes to pose a credible challenge to Ahmadinejad in the elections. When looking at the Mousavi campaign, it was probably the most impressive, modern and sophisticated campaign Iran yet has seen."

The fervor of that campaign and its aftermath took both sides aback. "I did not expect to see the people come out on the street," said Fatemeh Haghighatjoo, a reformist and former lawmaker who left Iran in 2005 after being arrested and is now a visiting scholar at the University of Massachusetts.

The protesters created a new dynamic outside the traditional power balance, said Abbas Milani, director of Iranian studies at Stanford University. "It's gone way beyond the reformist movement in Iran altogether; I think it is much wider."

Still, he said, the demonstrators chose to coalesce around the moderate Mousavi "rather than start afresh, with what would be a complete revolution." They have seen a revolution, he said, that was "ruthless and the most violent. People don't want that anymore."

Analysts said that for politicians such as former president Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, who has criticized the election, an upheaval is not desirable because they are longtime players in the existing system and would probably lose their standing in a brand-new government. Rather, analysts say, they are probably trying to strike a compromise within the system.

"There is a process of negotiation going on," Farhi said. "If Mr. Mousavi is expected to give up his call for reelection, then the question is: What is the other side going to give up?" Among the possibilities, she said, might be releasing those arrested, allowing the publication of reformist newspapers and letting people like Mousavi be politically active.

It is unclear whether the hard-liners would agree to such compromises. "Based on what we've seen the last four years, it's clear that Iran's hard-liners are not interested in sharing power or the country's vast oil wealth with anyone," said Karim Sadjadpour, an Iran analyst at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. "They're monopolists."

Reformists may also be thinking in a more radical direction, Sadjadpour said. "I think in private all the reformists would agree that the position of supreme leader needs to be either abolished or its powers need to be severely curtailed. But most are still too afraid to say it publicly. No one wants to use the word 'revolution,' but everyone understands that profound change is needed."

It is unclear whether this understanding is shared inside the government, which has suggested that those arrested for protesting the election may face harsh punishment and even execution.

The Guardian Council's confirmation of the election results has further limited reformists' options, said Ali Afshari, a student leader in Tehran in the 1990s who spent three years in prison and now lives in Washington. "They have closed any possibility for change inside the regime."

If the struggle has tipped into something more radical, that may not be evident on the streets, where the protests have largely been quelled. But analysts said this does not mean they are over.

"Reformist, pragmatic, centrist forces will continue to challenge his [Ahmadinejad's] rule and question the legitimacy" of his government, Parsi said. "The current protest movement is not a one-trick pony. It can manifest its protestations through many means."

Sadri, of Lake Forest College, said the reformists must "find new ways to stay organized and stay focused" to succeed in the long run. "They can wait for an opportunity -- an economic crisis, a political upheaval. . . . We don't have to plan their downfall, we just have to wait."

For now, Afshari said, the best compromise that dissenting politicians can hope for may be some positions in Ahmadinejad's cabinet. Mousavi is unlikely to be allowed much activity, Afshari said, adding that those seeking change will have to work outside the system, possibly with a new generation of leaders.

"They'll be definitely more radical but peaceful, like what we had in the Islamic revolution," he said. "After the shah closed all windows for reform, that's when people went to a revolutionary role."

.i listened to your "being no one" lecture at berkeley this afternoon after i wrote to you what follows is a sort of unedited stream of language reaction to your lecture
.i apologize for not taking the time to edit it and give it a more coherent form
.but, if i take the time from my other activities, i fear that i might not get around to it
.so here goes

.to me, the "self" has no more ontological status than a map to a territory
.it's a way of organizing experience into meaningful patterns... a figment
of the language machine

.i think your ideas about "self" are correct and point in the direction of future human evolution
.but these ideas must be couched in language that ordinary people can understand and Earth can move forward into a new epoch of Earth's history
.i'm expecting a sort of outbreak of enlightenment (no-self-hood) in Earth over the next 30-50 years
.i would imagine that even most academics have trouble REALLY grasping the implications of what you are saying

.we have to put this into language that ordinary people can grasp
.that's what i'm working on

.humans are not really a species
.if you take punctuated equilibrium seriously, it's clear that we are living
thru a punctuation

- .humans are a transitional form between the language monkeys and what's coming next
- .some call them transhumans
- .i call them Earthlings
- .one of the distinguishing characteristics of Earthlings is that are not identified with their language machines
- .they realize that the voice in their head is not something "they" are doing
- .it's a product of a physical structure operating according to the way it have been programmed
- .in my case, the operating system is largely english
- .you're lucky
- .you have a dual-boot BOS (Brain Operating System)

waking from the millenia old trance humans call "reality"

- .we have been under the spell of the language machine for many tens of thousands of years
- .now, it's time to wake up from the trance
- .we must realize the the voice in our head is not "me"
- .it's just my language machine... and it needs reprogramming

DID theory)i still prefer to call it MPD

- .the problem of people who suffer from MPD is not that they have too many "selves"... but too few
- .for some reason (usually extreme physical/sexual trauma) people lose the ability to create new selves (usually somewhere in their early teenage years)
- .this deficit is not a real problem as long as they remain in the environment in which they developed (home/neighborhood/school/etc.)

- .they begin to experience difficulties when they move into the adult world
- .their limited and immature set of personalities that worked in their previously limited environment begin to show their inadequacy
- .MPD usually present themselves to clinics in their mid twenties or a little later (unless they have been protected in a sheltered and limited environment where novelty is not intense
- .a "healthy" person has hundreds (or maybe more) finely gradated personalities capable of dealing with a wide variety of situations
- .and they have to ability to generate new ones when required (getting a new job for example)
- .old selves drop away if not called forth for a long time and new ones are generated when needed
- .so the solution for MPD patients is not to eliminate all these selves or integrate them into a single "real self", but to assist them in restarting the ability to generate new selves again... more current ones... more mature, up-to-date ones

.if this didn't scare you off, let's talk

jason's rant

I write you in a matter of urgency, the Planet needs your help.

what do the following things listed have in common?

language, the agricultural revolution, the compass, electricity, horse and buggy, the railroad, the car, the freeway, the telephone, the television, email, the world wide web

Chronologically they were each an essential pivot point that changed communication during the respective period they were invented. Right now the next great invention is on our fingertips, it just needs to be done! Using the world wide web as a platform, there needs to be a global communication center, where humans from all over the planet can talk to one another on a specified topic. While all the technology exists to get this done, a good working version of what I am describing does not exist. There have been a handful of systems that are similar to what I am describing, they all fail in a critical way, each having different faults. Some of the key failures of the current like systems which must be addressed include the following: not enough traffic, unreliable, costing money for the user, costing money for the developer and lack of motive (due to lack of profitability). With the right amount of capital invested, and a dedicated team, this could be done and address every one of these issues easily. I would like to point out that the key issues, and the reason I am writing you and not any person off the street, is that a profit motive does not align well with this system, to work well it will need to be funded on a voluntary basis. While not a financial investment, this is a relatively low cost investment in the future of the planet. (is that going to far off the deep end?.... i want to make this objective)

This will work, the planet needs it. While not exactly what I am describing we have seen similar systems that use the web morph the way we communicate, twitter, google, facebook, youtube to name some key ones. These are perfect examples of flourishing global communication systems. They have all benefited the welfare of the planet immensely. A loss of any one of these systems would be traumatic for millions to say the least. More importantly none of these systems seemed to be created with the motive of profit, and none of them are profitable as they are. Because they do cost money to operate they have been altered in some way to make a profit, but they are not primarily profit machines. I would say that the system i am describing is and will become more essential to the planets population than any of those.

A little more explanation of the system?

The key is that anyone can create a space on any topic, and that is really the key, user created spaces. To spark ideas, a topic could be "wrestling" "the death of michael jackson" "yoga instruction" 80's Karaoke" "United States-Mexico relations" "Contamination of global water systems" "i'm bored talk to me" you can see where it can go, the possibilities are endless. Every room would have a supreme authority, who governs the room, decides who can talk, who can assist in governing ect.

This system would need to be done well and require a fair amount of money. I am by no means an expert but i presume it would cost millions of dollars to build, probably less than 10 million. And probably 5 million or so a year to sustain itself and be financially healthy. Just ballpark estimates at best. It could cost more or less.

Not to intentionally repeat but you may be asking, why hasnt this been done already? Simple answer, it alfbolutely does not lend itse to profit. Unless somebody steps up to the plate with alot of money, this system may not exist anytime soon.

I would appreciate any help and/or feedback

e. o. wilson evolution/development

please allow me to introduce myself

.my name is heron stone

.i have spent 40 years studying the relationship between language and thinking, intelligence, creativity, consciousness, "spirituality", etc.

although i haven't gone into much depth beyond linguistics, i have been an avid reader in many sciences and a Science News addict for more than 35 years

.i heard your interview with will wright on npr tuesday morning

.so, i'll get to the point

.you mentioned that the great puzzle you are working on is, "who are we, where did we come from and where are we going"

first, a note about the nature of theories

.as alfred korzybski said, "the map is not the territory"
.there may be more than one "correct"/useful map for the same territory
.i don't have to choose between a topo map and a street map
.i keep them both and bring out the appropriate one for the given job

.evolution is one way of thinking about the evidence of the fossil record
.it's a framework within which we can make sense of the evidence
.it's certainly not THE WAY IT IS.

.here is an alternative mapping
+consider Earth as an individual living organism, with a teleology of its own

.a frog embryo goes through a lot of changes in its development
.but it's not merely random process
.it's not going to turn into a petunia, or a poodle
.it's going to develop into a frog... or it will die

.since everywhere we look, we see species of organisms... not random collections of organisms, it seems like a not unreasonable assumption that a similar structure might apply to the universe as a whole

.we can think of Earth as a member of a species of "planets"
.a planet of a given chemical composition at a certain distance from a star of a particular type might yield an Earth
.there might be million of Earths in our galaxy alone, each of them following a course as similar as members of any species

?where is Earth headed

.my theory is that it is headed towards self-consciousness

.punctuated equilibrium indicted that Earth is presently in a period of punctuation
.humans are involved in it
.humans aren't really a species... yet
.humans are in a transition between what i call the language monkeys and something new... Earthlings
.we are witnessing the emergence of the first global civilization populated by "enlightened" people... i.e. people who have broken out of the millennia-old linguistically-induced trance humans call "reality"
.we are the mechanism of Earth's awareness

.i'm not suggesting that this is THE WAY IT IS... only that this way of thinking might shed light on aspects of Earth's development that remain dark in the light of evolution... like the future

thanks for a lifetime of great work

the movies concept of self... as learned by children

.in many movies and tv programs, people are one-dimensional
.they embody a type... arrogant, happy, stupid, shy, aggressive, etc
.children are taught what it is to be a "person"
.they must have a CORE self that remains unchanged forever
.that may well be accurate, but it's not about "personality" types
"persons" are infinitely complex and multifaceted and unpredictable beings... mysteries
.all we have is statistics
.we can never be sure in any given real situation
.it's dangerous to forget that

Language is what distinguishes us from all other living beings in Earth.

For millennia, humans have lived in a linguistically induced hypnotic trance they mistake for "reality".

It only takes a moment to wake up.

Students are accepted on one of three tracks

1. one-one-one coaching
2. 4-person teams

rescue Earth from the humans

.this isn't talk radio and i'm not here to entertain you

.i'm here to recruit Earthlings and do party/business

just read the CAPS stuff if you want to skip the details and just get a quick idea... without any substance

.i see two different potential Earthling candidates

1. young people who recognized the perversion of the old system and want no part of it
2. more mature people who have come the realize that they will not be satisfied with achieving what most people seem to aspire to

.both of these populations are growing exponentially
.people are not satisfied with their lives or the way the world is going

.it might be because you're not a human
.you may be a member of an emerging new species of language monkey

.language is a great tool
.without it, there would be no civilization, no technology, no love, no poetry, no monty python
.language is at once our greatest tool... and, if mismanaged, an instrument of our destruction
.humans have been entranced by their language machines for many tens of thousands of years... from the beginning really .people have been trained to identify with the voice in their head... as if that is who i am... whatever "am" could possibly mean
.the language machines have been in control
.and they did a great job up until very recently
.about 10,000 years ago everything began to change... except our language... the ways we think about our experience... our life
.but language has now begun to catch up
.we're getting real close to a "technology" of consciousness

.some of you many have become disenchanted with the ways of thinking about things that you were taught (programmed with) as a child
.it's not an easy realization that the things that seem to motivate most people... are empty or meaningless to you
.you're headed somewhere else
.you may not even know exactly where
.but you know the old way is no longer at the center of your heart

.you are not alone

.there are millions of people around Earth who are waking up to a new understanding... a new world

.if no one here wants to talk with me, you may be listening to a recording of a previous conversation

.i am here, working one one of several projects/etc., so i may not always respond to your text or requests to speak

.humans have been programmed to identify with the voice in their head... what i call the language machine

.because that's what it is... literally... a programmable machine... made of meat, not silicon

.humans believe everything they hear their language machine say because they think "i" said it
